Transition ID

If you've used any Transition platform services, you've likely generated an ID during your initial registration. This ID serves as your universal key to access other web services provided by the Transition platform.

For instance, if you've registered an account on hub.transition-space.org, you can employ the same ID to gain entry to additional services like https://helpdesk.transition-space.org/ or https://maps.transitionnetwork.org.

The integration of these services is facilitated by Keycloak, a software component installed at https://id.transition-space.org/. This central authentication system streamlines access across the Transition platform, making it convenient for us to navigate and access the various offerings without the need for multiple accounts or logins.
